'Part-C of gender budget statement inflates amount spent on women's welfare'

SUBASHINI VIJAYAKUMAR
@Chennai

THE gender budget statement released on Monday stated that ₹1.22 lakh crore was allocated for welfare of women under various schemes in which the women beneficiaries ranged from 30-100 %.

This includes ₹27,915 crore under Part A - schemes that are targeted only for women, ₹31,576 crore in Part B - schemes where the women beneficiaries range from 40-99% and ₹55,739 crore in Part C - schemes in which at least 30% beneficiaries are women. However, no list or details about the schemes under Part C were mentioned.

"The gender budget statement of the central government as well as several other state governments has only parts A and B. The Part C introduced by the Tamil Nadu government only inflates the amount spent on the welfare of women in the state without reflecting the reality, as it is much higher than the first two parts," said S Kamatchi from Social Watch, Tamil Nadu.

Endorsing the view, Bimla Chandrasekaran, director of Ekta Resource Centre for Women, said gender budgeting serves no purpose if one of the major sections does not have any specifics and is used just to inflate numbers.

Activists have also demanded the government to release an exclusive document for the gender budget statement which is now part of the appendices to the budget memorandum.

Across the country, at least 11 states have been releasing it as a separate document.

They also want the state government to make a performance-oriented statement with details on the number of women beneficiaries to ensure schemes are not added to categories without any basis. Earlier this month, more than 87 activists signed a joint statement pressing for these demands.

According to the standard operating procedure released by the central government for gender budgeting, the government has to conduct situational analysis of women in the state, following which the departments have to conduct pre-budget consultations with the stakeholders to bring out a performance-based gender budget statement.

Recently, the Comptroller and Auditor General had advised the Kerala government to bring out performance-based gender budgeting statements, failing which the objective of gender budgeting would be defeated.

However in Tamil Nadu, the government is yet to form gender budgeting cells in many departments which are responsible for analysing the schemes. Despite a government order released in July, 2022, only five including the social welfare department out of more than 40 departments have gender budgeting cells, as of December, 2023, according to an RTI reply.

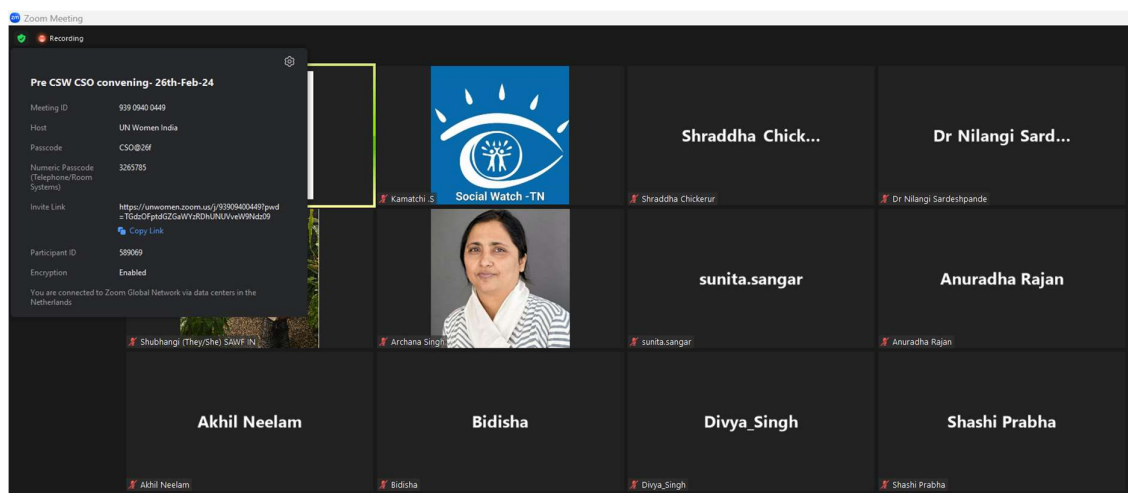

However, the women's groups have welcomed the move to include the accounts, budget estimates and revised estimates of 2023-24 in the statement as the previous six statements had only the budget estimates of that single financial year.

On 21st February 2024, SWTN and PAALAM organized a consultation on “Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes Development Fund (SCSP & TSP)” at TAISHA, Virugambakkam.

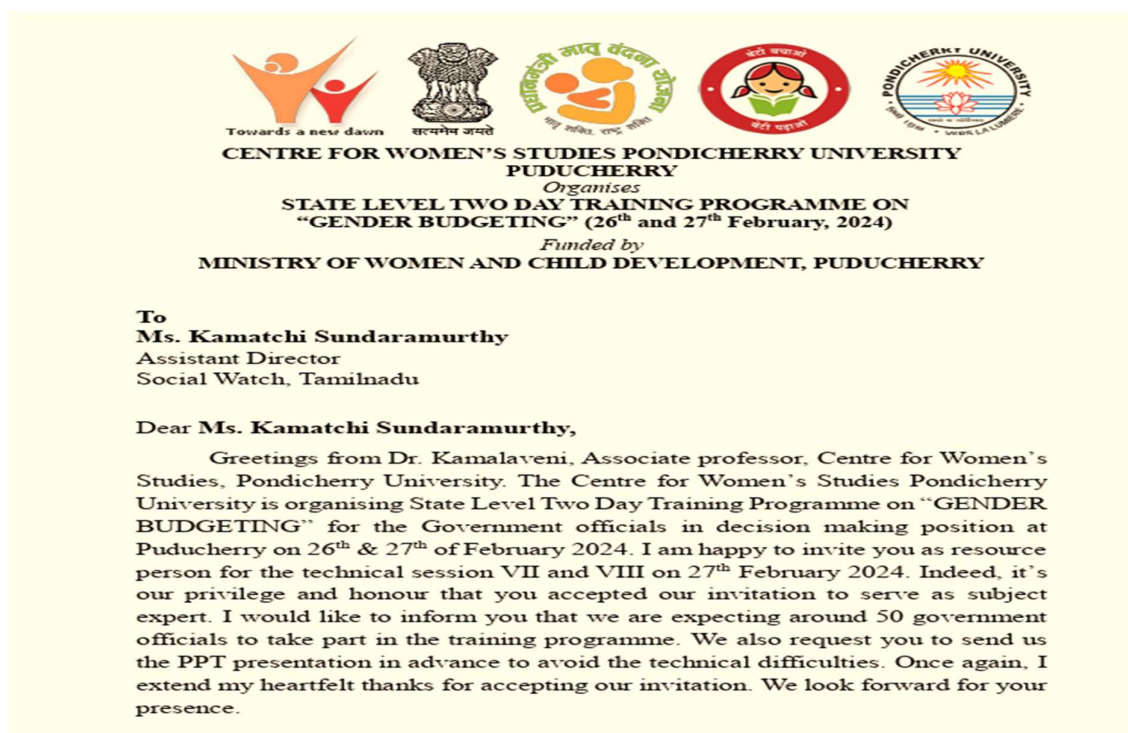

On 26th February 2024, Ms. Kamatchi, virtually participated in the Hybrid programme on “Pre-CSW Consultation with Civil Society Partners in India towards 68th Commission on the Status of Women (CSW); held at UN House, New Delhi.

On 27th February 2024, Ms. Kamatchi was invited to handle two technical sessions on Application of Gender Budget Techniques and Gender Budget Statement during the State Level Two Day Training Programme On “Gender Budgeting”, Organized by Department of Women and Child Development, Government of Puducherry in Collaboration with Centre For Women’s Studies-Pondicherry University; Funded By Ministry Of Women And Child Development; held at Puducherry.

On 29th February 2024, Ms. Kamatchi's recommendations were incorporated in The Hindu Newspaper article on "Gender budgeting requires more robust and intersectional process".

Gender budgeting requires more robust and intersectional process, finds study

The Gender Budget Statement (GBS) released by the Tamil Nadu government shows a need for an intersectional and decentralised gender budgeting process, according to a fact file on the statement conducted by the Information and Resource Centre for the Deprived Urban Communities (IRCDUC).

Drawing a parallel to the Punjab government's Gender Budget, which also includes a Part C, S. Kamatchi, assistant director, Social Watch said "The Punjab government's gender budget, which has a Part C, has scheme-supported narration. How can Part C in the Tamil Nadu GBS be more when compared to the other two parts?"...

Women's group activists also pointed out that pre-budget consultation, sectoral reviews, gender performance audit or analysis of previous GBS to assess adequacy of estimation. "There needs to be a way for the civil society organisations to be part of the discussion so that beneficial schemes can be formulated. Further there is also a need for a decentralised gender budget which can address issues regarding women from all classes," added Ms. Kamatchi.

Citing the example of the Punjab government where the Finance Department and Social Security, Women and Child Development Department prepare the GBS, she further added the departments could work together where the Social Welfare department could implement the scheme.
